

Learning Objectives

Over the past several months, COVID-19 has challenged HR leaders to support their companies and people through times of stress, uncertainty, new priorities and sometimes, an entirely new mission. The rapid shift to remote / contact-less working put many company cultures to the test. Organizations and their leaders currently have the unique opportunity to intentionally redefine the work experience and holistically consider things that influence culture such as structure, processes, communication, capabilities, values and behaviors.

This series will help promote deliberate discussion and conscious reflection on critical success factors for complex culture change.
